Performance Summary

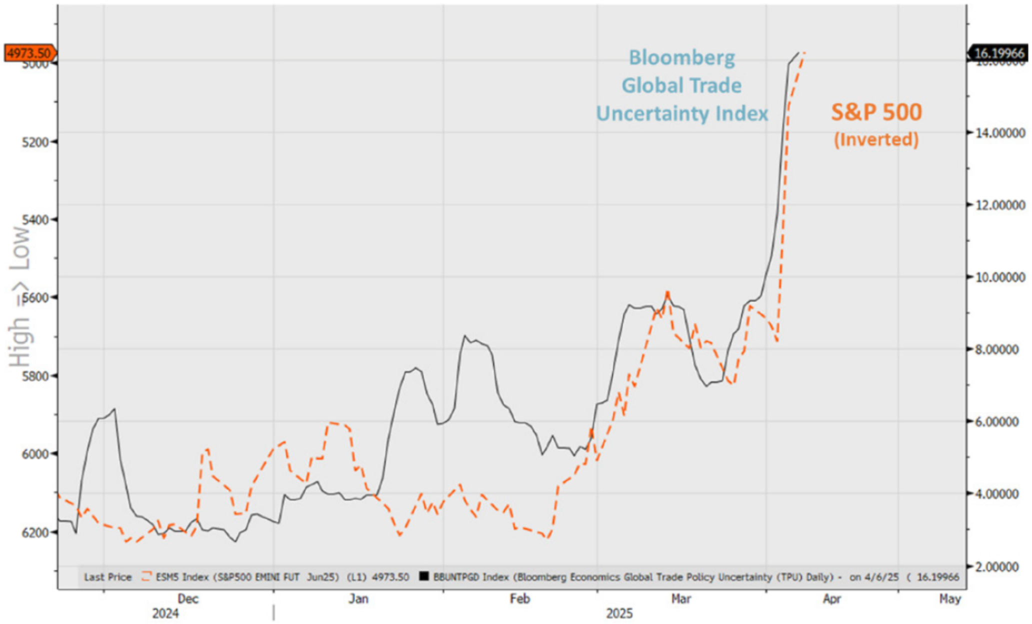
- Over the first quarter of 2025, Starlight Global Growth Fund, Series F (the Fund) returned 1.3%.
- Industrials, Financials, and Consumer Staples were the top sector contributors to performance, which was slightly offset by a decline in Information Technology and Real Estate.

These are agonising times as it remains unclear how this man-made trade disaster will resolve itself as the fire spreads through financial markets. We can take comfort that our portfolio has a number of resilient characteristics and these high-quality stocks are some of the most adaptable, durable, tested and mission-critical businesses in the world. These companies have remarkable healing power and markets often embrace a short memory if we hold our nerve.

Five key takeaways

1. Approximately 20% of our portfolio is invested in weatherproof holdings — less economically sensitive and recession resistant. Stocks like Rollins (pest control), Waste Connections (garbage collection), Coca-Cola (drinks), Mondelez (chocolate), TJX (off-price retail) and recent purchase O'Reilly (auto parts).
2. The U.S. dollar usually strengthens in a market crisis, thereby dampening the downside as the Fund has more than 70% of its investments in the US.
3. There are some automatic stabilisers in the economy that should soften the impact on the US consumer, including falling oil prices, lower bond yields and a Fed that will cut rates more quickly as recession risks grow.
4. We have no debt or investments on margin in the portfolio and are buyers on weakness.
5. Any relief in global trade uncertainty will trigger a monster rally in risk assets.

THE MARKET HAS 1 KNOWN PRIMARY ISSUE… THE REST IS UNKNOWN AND DEPENDENT ON THIS



Source: Bloomberg; data 31 Oct 2024 to 7 Apr.

US President Donald Trump's 'Liberation Day' delivered worse than the worst-case scenario as a thick protectionist fog has engulfed world trade. The market has abandoned faith in Trump's pro-business characteristics and his sensitivity to stock markets. This was reinforced when Treasury Secretary Scott Bessent used President Ronald Reagan's first term as a historical analogy. In the first two years following Reagan's victory in November 1980, the S&P 500 sold off by circa 25% as US Federal Reserve Chair Paul Volcker drastically tightened interest rates to fight inflation. This was followed by a 180% rally over the next six years. And this is the medicine that Trump hopes we're willing to swallow (perhaps we've previously underestimated his grasp of history?).

Meanwhile, the pivot from Wall Street to Main Street has been reinforced by the Trump administration's focus on bringing down interest rates to refinance US debt as cheaply as possible. That may signal fairly high tolerance of further equity market downside in the short term. Mass reshoring is the goal. Tariffs need to stay on the agenda to get companies to relocate production to the US and to force other countries to capitulate on trade terms.

Trump is creating maximum leverage for himself in the hope this lays the foundations for an epic window of dealmaking. He likes to commence discussions with destabilised adversaries reeling from the impact of his broadsides. On the flipside, Trump knows that 62% of Americans own stocks.

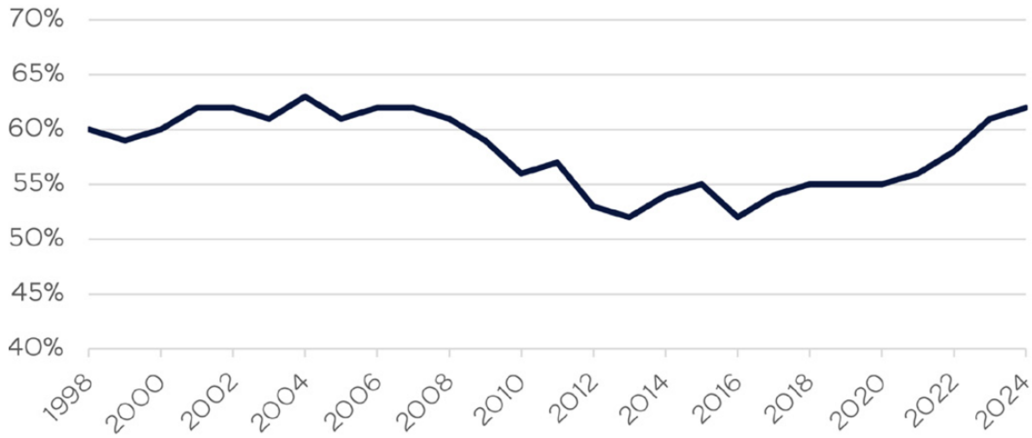
PROPORTION OF US HOUSEHOLDS INVESTED IN STOCK MARKET



Source: Gallup.

While investors may question Trump's megalomania and his dogged focus on ruining the economy — his 37-page Annex 2 list of tariff-exempt goods reveals a surprising sensitivity. It includes energy products, chemicals used in energy manufacturing, critical minerals, pharmaceuticals, copper, semiconductors and more. Perhaps much more thought and consideration went into the formulation of tariff policy than is generally appreciated? The list seeks to exempt industries of national security importance. Notably, the catalogue of oil, gas and energy products excluded from the tariffs suggests that energy deflation is high on the Trump administration's priority list.

The unprecedented nature of this crisis will keep many investors on the sidelines, but historically periods of stress have provided buying opportunities. The latest American Association of Individual Investors survey shows 'bearish' investor sentiment has spiked to its third-highest level of all time — similar to historic catastrophes such as the Global Financial Crisis, COVID and the 1990 crash. Recent bad news, such as the retaliation for China's reciprocal tariffs, has not triggered a new wave of selling pressure. Perhaps markets are starting to price in the recession risk? Moreover, episodes of investor capitulation have historically been followed by quite profitable stock market returns. We've added a new holding to the fund during this market meltdown and will be adding another in short order.
